

Director of the Kathryn M. Buder Center for American Indian Studies

Washington University in St. Louis, Missouri invites applications and nominations for the position of Director of the Kathryn M. Buder Center for American Indian Studies in the George Warren Brown School of Social Work. The Buder Center is a leading center for comprehensive and interdisciplinary studies and practice to address issues of social concern to American Indians, their families and communities.

The Buder Center is poised for strong growth in its educational and research programs and for taking new leadership in the preparation of students and in the support of faculty who will make significant contributions to American Indian studies and to improving the lives of American Indians. This position offers a unique opportunity for an individual with vision to lead the premier center for American Indian social work and studies into a new era of success.

The ideal candidate will have a record of programmatic leadership and direct engagement with American Indian Country. The director will have demonstrated expertise in the areas of research, program development and administration.

Washington University has engaged the firm of Isaacson, Miller to assist in identifying and reviewing candidates for this position. Inquiries, nominations and applications may be directed in confidence to the search firm. Application materials should include: a letter describing the candidate's interest in and qualifications for the position and a current curriculum vitae. Electronic submissions are strongly preferred. Please submit materials to:

Jamie Sands, Associate
Isaacson, Miller
334 Boylston Street, Boston, MA 02116
3692@imsearch.com

Washington University is an equal opportunity, affirmative action institution and encourages applications from and nominations of women and minority candidates.

 Washington University in St. Louis